

House Pseudoscorpion

Chelifer cancroides

Chelifer cancroides is one of the world's most widely distributed and well-known pseudoscorpions. It occurs in at least 58 countries and thrives in a variety of habitats. It is, however, most commonly associated with human dwellings where it feeds on small invertebrates living in books, linens, stacks of paper, wall coverings, and dust.

